

First Annual

Bill Trampleasure Memorial Poetry Reading

November 10, 2013

2:45 - 4:15

Community Room
Main Branch Berkeley Public Library

Bring your own poem, read your favorite of Bill's poems, or just listen...

Scratch around for hope.
It's there to be found -
in the starry roof of night,
in the fertile floor of ground.

Scratch around for hope.
It may be nearer than you think -
a phone to, or from, a friend,
a drink from the kitchen sink.

Scratch around for hope.
It's mind boggling, I know
but even when you're blue,
someone's hope
may lie in you!

There's something about a line of clothes no
dryer can replace,

the smile of a rainbow wash across God's white/blue face

more information:

www.EarthCommunityILoveYou.org

